WHAT DO THEY DO?

Combat the heroin and opioid crisis in Maryland through prevention, enforcement, treatment, and recovery.

WHY?

Residents of all ages, races, genders, and areas across the state are affected by heroin and opioid misuse. State and local health and human services, education, and public safety officials are working together to develop community-based programs and services to combat this public health crisis.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Governor Hogan declared a State of Emergency on March 1, 2017, increasing federal, state, and local agency response to the heroin and opioid crisis. Those agencies include:

- Governor's Office of Crime Control & Preventions
- Department of Health and Mental Hygiene
- Maryland Emergency Management Agency
- Maryland Department of State Police
- Maryland State Department of Education
- Department of Human Resources
- Department of Juvenile Services
- Dept. of Public Safety and Correctional Services
- Maryland Institute for Emergency Medical Services Systems
- Maryland Higher Education Commission
- Maryland Insurance Administration
- Office of the Attorney General

By working together in the Opioid Operational Command Center, agencies can share data, information, and ideas, for how to combat this epidemic.

Together, we can reduce the harmful impact of opioid addiction on Maryland communities.
